Task 2 — Multiple Choice (Questions 7-11)

Text: Teenagers and Screen Time

A recent study looked at how much time teenagers spend on screens each day. On average, young people aged 13 to 18 spend about seven hours in front of a phone, tablet, or computer — not counting time used for homework. Researchers found that this habit has both benefits and disadvantages.

On the positive side, technology helps teenagers stay connected with friends and family. Many use social media to share experiences, join interest groups, and support each other. Educational apps and online tutoring platforms have also made learning more accessible for students in rural areas.

However, experts warn that too much screen time, especially before bed, can disrupt sleep patterns. Poor sleep affects concentration, mood, and overall health. Some teenagers reported feeling anxious or unhappy after spending long periods on social media, particularly when they compared themselves to others online.

Specialists recommend balancing screen time with outdoor activities, face-to-face socialising, and regular sleep routines. Setting daily screen limits and taking short breaks every hour can make a significant difference.

7. How many hours of screen time do teenagers typically have per day, according to the study?

• A) About

8. What is one positive effect of technology for students in rural areas?
